

NEW! Satellite Timeline

The SSPI Satellite Timeline is the first interactive Web site to chronicle the rich and diverse history of the commercial satellite industry. Launching in October 2007 - the 50th anniversary of Sputnik - the Timeline will be a tool not only for companies seeking to list their achievements and promote their products and services, but for students, the news media and others who follow the industry and appreciate its contributions to human progress.

Using Flash animation, the Timeline opens up the achievements, decade by decade, since Sir Arthur C. Clarke suggested the concept of a global network of communications satellites in geostationary orbit around the Earth. The Timeline is created by SSPI in consultation with leading educators, publishers, and a Board of Advisors responsible for the quality of its content. Timeline sponsorship is available at three levels:

Timeline Sponsors	<ul style="list-style-type: none">• Logo display, with a link to the sponsor's site, throughout a user's Timeline session.• Logo display on the SSPI home page link to the Timeline• Right to post up to five events approved by the Board of Advisors to the Timeline	$10,000 per year
